1320-1405	Topic 1: A day in the life of a digital forensic expert with the Edmonton Police Service (Kevin Chung, Edmonton Police) ▲ The session will explore digital forensic workflows, specialized training, investigative techniques, real-world case examples, and how forensic teams assist investigators in examining computers, mobile devices, and other technology-related evidence. Attendees will also gain insight into emerging trends, research and development activities, cybercrime investigations, and the growing role of AI and digital technologies in modern policing.	Inform
1405-1450	Topic 2: Too much tech debt & cyber risk, Now what? Deciding what to carry when you can't fix everything. (Julie Chatman, ResilientTech Advisors) ▲ Organizations rarely have enough funding, people, or time to address every piece of technical debt or cybersecurity issue. This session examines what happens when risk must be carried, how leaders can prioritize what gets fixed, and what responsible risk acceptance looks like. Using practical examples, Julie will explore risk ownership, competing priorities, decision clarity, and how to turn a technology and cybersecurity backlog into an intentional risk-management process that protects your organization's mission.
